Peace River Regional District launches design study for Spencer Tuck Regional Park

The Peace River Regional District (PRRD) has started a design study to identify and plan for enhancements to safety, accessibility and overall appeal of Spencer Tuck Regional Park.

The study will examine challenges such as traffic flow, parking, washrooms and boat launch access. It will also evaluate whether the boat launch needs repairs or replacement. After completing the study, a plan will be developed to address the current and future needs of park visitors and other interest groups.

Community feedback is an important aspect of this study, and the PRRD is gathering input through a survey, open houses—both in-person and virtual—and meetings with interest groups.

Located 32 kilometers north of Chetwynd, Spencer Tuck Regional Park covers 5.18 hectares and is a popular summer spot with fire pits, picnic tables, trails and the only public boat launch on the north side of Moberly Lake. The lake is 14 kilometers long with a 41-kilometer shoreline. It is bordered by private properties, with a transportation right of way running through it. Since 2023, the park has been closed during winter months.

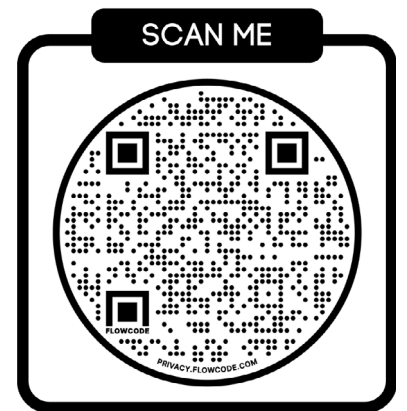

Residents are encouraged to take the survey by scanning the QR code. For details on the open houses or to learn more about the project, visit haveyoursay.prrd.bc.ca/stpds.

Community engagement leads Regional Growth Strategy

The PRRD has released a public engagement report summarizing key findings and themes from communities across the region regarding the Regional Growth Strategy (RGS). The RGS is a long-term plan addressing anticipated changes over the next 20 years, including population growth, service needs, economic shifts and climate impacts.

Launched in August 2023, the RGS project will run until May 2025. During two phases of public engagement, survey respondents identified four priority issues: the regional economy, housing and affordability, agriculture and food security and public health and safety. The project team also visited nine communities to gather feedback, with common themes emphasizing the importance of maintaining rural character, ensuring affordable housing and improving transportation infrastructure.
